6 DAYS: ROBERT SCOTT WILSON RETURNS

The news of Ben's escape from the psychiatric hospital marks portrayer Robert Scott Wilson's DAYS comeback. "[Co-Executive Producer] Albert Alarr told me toward the end of my first arc on DAYS that I would be coming back," says the actor. "So I knew that there would be more story for Ben."

The actor was busy during his time away from Salem. "I jumped into a couple of films [Father and I Know Where Lizzie Is] and I have good things on the burner," he shares. "I've also been auditioning. It's pilot season, so it's a great time to be available and open to opportunities. I'm also in a new acting class. I have an amazing coach and work with awesome actors, so even though I'm not getting paid for it, it's still like work."

As for what's ahead for his alter ego, Wilson teases, "Ben comes back because he wants to know what's going on. Granted, Ben hasn't forgotten what happened, but he wants to be back in the realm of a place he considered home. Ben may also be able to bypass thoughts of the terrible things he has done." Wilson views his current stint as a new chapter. "For me, by the end of my first run, I feel that Ben had completed an arc," he notes. "So this is now a fresh new arc for myself and what I make for Ben. I am excited that he's coming back."

Wilson reports that everything felt very familiar on his first day back at the set. "Other than a few new faces, it was like I never left. DAYS was my home base for two years prior, so I feel at home there. I've got love for those people, so it's all good." And he kept in touch with DAYS pals Billy Flynn (Chad) and Kate Mansi (Abigail) while he was gone. "Kate and I touch base and bounce projects off each other if we see something. Kate was also telling me about a proj-

DAYS RENEWED!

After months of protracted negotiations, NBC's 50-year-old soap has been renewed for another year until September 2017, with an option for an additional year that would take the sudser into 2018.

In a statement, Jennifer Salke, president, Entertainment, noted, "NBC is incredibly proud of the legacy of DAYS OF OUR LIVES and we couldn't be more excited to bring its fans new stories.... In a business where having a show remain on the air for two seasons is considered a success, what DAYS has achieved is extraordinary."

The cast was understandably thrilled by the news. With DAYS's taping schedule, the show is five months ahead, and would have had to close its doors for good in March had the pickup not occurred. Insiders whisper that one of the sticking points was NBC's concern about the soap taping so far ahead. To that end, the show will reportedly shut down for five weeks to make up some production time.

The cast received word of the renewal on set. Thaao Penghlis (Andre) tweeted, "It was announced quietly on stage 2. The faces of the crew said it all. The magic that is DAYS continues." Galen Gering (Rafe), a Salem resident since 2008, tweeted, "So excited for the @nbcdays family and for all our incredible fans. Many great stories will continue to be told. Congratulations #days."

ect that she was doing," he offers. "It's always good to hear that people are staying on the top of their game. I'm doing an event with Billy this July in Toronto."

Regarding his omission from the Daytime Emmy nomination list, which had fans crying foul on social media, he says, "I feel bad for the fans that they didn't get what they expected, not just for myself, but for Martha Madison (Belle), who returned to the show in November, tells Digest, "I'm just so grateful to the viewers who have supported the show for so many generations. Without them, we wouldn't get to continue doing what we love so much! Thank you! Thank you! Thank you!" Christopher Sean (Paul) shares, "I'm over the moon with DAYS's renewal. DAYS has always been a major supporter of all walks of life and I'm so lucky to continue this journey with my DAYS family!" Mary Beth Evans (Kayla) says, "We have all been waiting and waiting and waiting to hear about the pick-up and couldn't be more excited that it's finally happened! We are so excited for future fabulous stories like we have had this past year. The writing and producing teams are so amazing and I know we are in good hands! Cheers to DAYS's 51st year!"

"This is now a fresh new arc for myself and what I make for Ben. I am excited."

a number of other people on the show, as well," he opines. "My mom was disappointed, which made me disappointed. But ultimately, I'm good with it. I'm glad for everybody who received a [nominations]. I hope that DAYS takes them all and I wish the best for my colleagues."

DAYS: JOEY MURDERS AVA!

Overwhelmed by the turmoil that Ava is putting his parents through, Joey heads for the hospital and slips into Ava's room. There, he takes a pillow and smothers her. "Joey is driven by a combination of emotion and alcohol," previews James Lastovic (Joey). "He's completely irrational and in a pretty unconscious state of mind. Joey's frustration has been building up for the past couple of months. Everything he wants is being pulled away from him. His parents' relationship is in trouble because of Ava, who Joey fell in love with. He's a ticking time bomb and he finally explodes."

Steve enters the room and catches his son in the act. "Steve's reaction is all-encompassing, a feeling of horror," states Stephen Nichols (Steve). He quickly tears Joey away from Ava. "When his dad comes in and makes contact with Joey, it sort of wakes him up from the nightmare that he's been in," describes Lastovic.

Steve checks Ava's pulse and realizes that she is dead. "Steve's primary concern is protecting Joe," asserts Nichols. "He needs to talk him down so he can get him out of there [and] away from the scene of the crime — safely." Lastovic adds, "Joey is dumbfounded by what just happened. When his dad tells him to go home, he just does it. He leaves in shock."

Joey arrives home and Kayla can sense something is wrong. As she questions Joey, the phone rings with word of the crisis at the hospital. Kayla rushes out of the house, with her son by her side. At the hospital, Steve — who has taken responsibility for the crime — is being questioned by the police. “Kayla is shocked by what has happened,” shares portrayer Mary Beth Evans. “As a doctor, Kayla would never wish death upon anyone. But she doesn’t have time to think about it because she is concerned about Steve.”

Joey’s demeanor suddenly changes when he figures out what’s going on. “I don’t think Joey realizes until he gets back to the hospital that his dad is trying to take the blame for him,” says Lastovic. “By that point, Joey’s focus switches. The only thing he’s worried about is his dad. Joey’s immediate instinct is to confess. He can’t stand the thought of his dad taking the blame for what he did.”

Steve manages to have a private moment with Joey and urges him to keep mum. “If it were up to Joey, he would confess, but Steve is pretty adamant about Joey keeping quiet, so he listens to his dad,” explains Lastovic.

After Steve is taken to the police station, the situation weighs heavily on his son. “He tries to hide what really happened from his mom, but the pressure from the guilt that Joey’s feeling builds up,” Lastovic details. Finally, Joey tells Kayla the truth. “Kayla is horrified for her son,” Evans says. “He’s traumatized and she desperately wants to protect him.”

Later, Kayla and Steve have a chance to talk. “Kayla lets Steve know that Joey has told her the truth,” notes the actress.

“Joey’s immediate instinct is to confess. He can’t stand the thought of his dad taking the blame for what he did.”

“She’s thankful that Steve is willing to protect the family by taking the fall for their boy. She works with Steve to make sure people do not find out the truth, but she also tries to prove that Steve was in the right to do it because he was acting in self-defense.”

Like Steve, Kayla’s utmost concern is Joey. “She wants to protect him at all costs,” stresses Evans, “which means she will lie to her brother Roman and let Steve take the blame. Her head is spinning with the ramifications of all this. She doesn’t know how Joey will live with the guilt and the pending loss of Steve, if he is convicted and locked away.”

Roman questions Steve further about Ava’s murder, pressing him for more details because there are pieces that don’t add up. Specifically, why was Joey’s blood found on the pillow used to kill Ava? “When Roman questions Steve about the blood that was found, Steve tells Roman that Joe came in after Steve had smothered Ava and that he remembered Joe had a cut on his hand,” offers Nichols.

Alone in his cell, Steve weighs the various angles, wondering if there is a way to get himself out of the mess that he’s in. “Steve has fought so hard to get back with his family, he will do anything to stay in their good graces, but his first priority is protecting Joe,” reminds Nichols.

When things seem at their worst for Steve, an interesting twist develops. Nichols teases, “Unbeknownst to Steve, someone is working behind the scenes to get him off.”

GH: LIZ, JASON AND SAM CONVERGE IN PHILADELPHIA

In Philadelphia at Shriners Hospitals for Children, Jason and Elizabeth are relieved to get word that Jake's surgery went well. Her spirits are further lifted when Nikolas brings Aiden and Cameron for a visit, though Liz is less than thrilled when Sam makes an appearance with Danny in tow.

According to Co-Head Writer Shelly Altman, Elizabeth is doing her level best to accept Sam's renewed significance in Jason's life. "While Liz has been forced to accept the change in their relationship, the fact that Jason is moving in a new direction, she's not just fine; I don't want to suggest it's, 'Okay, we'll all be friends.' There's always going to be some tension." And Jake's issues will keep the characters in close proximity. "They are co-parents of a child who right now has physical issues and possibly some other issues, given his strange upbringing for half his life. They have a job to share for their son."

Sam and Jason's Philadelphia reunion marks their first encounter since sharing that heated good-bye kiss back in Port Charles, and their reconnection proceeds apace. "In a way, they're circling around each other a little bit," muses Co-Head Writer Jean Passanante. "He's falling in love with her anew, really, and she really likes him, but they're in different places now, so it's like a new relationship, but with all these underpinnings of love." Adds Altman, "It's like you reconnect with the guy you loved in college and haven't seen for a number of years. A lot has happened in between, but what was there is still there."

Liz's deepening friendship with Franco also takes a step forward when he impulsively jets to Philly, and both writers say that they enjoy exploring their unlikely connection. "It just kind of happened naturally," Altman offers. "They were both in this hospital setting and it made sense that Franco, in his capacity as art therapist, would interact with her child, and when we saw them together, we thought, 'This is just really interesting.' She certainly has reasons to not want to be a friend to Franco, and Franco is trying to change his life. We just found that a very interesting and unusual relationship, not relationship with a capital R." And in this instance, Franco's track record may uniquely qualify him to be a pal to the disgraced Ms. Webber. Chuckles Passanante, "The only person not in a position to judge Elizabeth is Franco!"

B&B: WYATT PROPOSES TO STEFFY!

■ Wyatt makes it official this week when he asks Steffy to marry him. "Wyatt is a guy who lives in the moment," points out his portrayer, Darin Brooks. "He's a take-charge kind of guy. They're spending all this time together, creating this relationship, and they're finally letting themselves happen, so he goes for it."

Despite the fact that Wyatt just proposed to ex-girlfriend Ivy over the holidays, Brooks insists that his character doesn't take this proposal to Steffy lightly. "Wyatt has always had feelings for Steffy and he got in touch with them," the actor explains. "There was a flirtation between them before Ivy, and those feelings came up easily. After getting his heart broken by Ivy, he realized that he was doing something wrong. He thought that these 'good' girls, like Hope and Ivy, were the ones he was supposed to be with. That's not to say that Steffy's not a good girl, but it dawned on Wyatt that he has been trying to be something he's not. Wyatt and Steffy get each other. They both go after what they want wholeheartedly and passionately, and he realizes Steffy's the yin to his yang."

As Steffy mulls her decision, Wyatt realizes that he's facing opposition to their union from both families. "There's always going to be some hesitation from Ridge and Thomas and everybody who is close to Steffy," Brooks notes.

"Liam's gone and Wyatt's willing to let the chips fall where they may."

"Obviously, everybody knows the history of Steffy and Liam — and Wyatt and Ivy — so there is a little apprehension for everybody to accept these two right away. That goes for Bill, as well. He always wanted Steffy and Liam to be together. Not to mention, no one knows where Liam is or what's going on with him but obviously, he doesn't want to be here."

Speaking of Liam, "Quinn does plant the seed in Wyatt's ear that time is of the essence, and Wyatt jumps on that," Brooks teases, unaware of his brother's captive plight. "He is very much thinking, 'Let's strike while the iron is hot.' Liam's gone and Wyatt's willing to let the chips fall where they may, and when Liam comes back, they'll deal with him then. Why should they put lives on hold for him? They love each other. They've fallen for each other. Let's see where it goes. If something happens later, it happens but right now, full steam ahead."

Y&R'S HILARY AND ASHLEY CLASH

Hilary decides she wants to take a more active role in Simon's research project. "This research means a lot to Hilary and she wants to make sure that it gets the positive attention that it deserves," explains Mishael Morgan (Hilary). "She wants to handle the PR and marketing for the project. Saving Neil's press conference from bombing helped her realize how important she can be to the research. She has what it takes to help this project, so why shouldn't she have more responsibility? She can bring a lot more to the table than she does right now."

That starts with Hilary's determination to improve Simon's outward appearance for an unexpected photo shoot. She brings wardrobe items into the lab for the doc to try on. "He doesn't react very well to it at all," sighs Morgan. "He's very comedic, in his own way, and then Ashley comes in and shoots down the whole thing. She thinks Hilary's idea is a waste of time."

"[Ashley] thinks Hilary's idea is a waste of time."

After pointing out that Simon is a very busy man, Ashley orders Hilary to leave the lab. "At first, Hilary is feeling a little insecure about how Simon and Hilary are putting down her suggestions, but Hilary thinks it's very important for the success of the project," says Morgan. "So that just pushes her to fight for her position."

Devon shows up just as the ladies are arguing and Simon is trying to referee. After hearing the cause of the skirmish, Devon surprises his wife by questioning the need for a photo shoot. Before Hilary can respond, Ashley feels faint, necessitating Simon to quickly escort her into the office. Hilary then vents to her husband for not supporting her but they're interrupted when Neville emerges from the office and leaves. "Devon tells Hilary that she can get what she wants, she just needs to finesse it and use a softer approach," Morgan shares. "She takes that advice to heart and decides to talk it out with Ashley so they can define boundaries and not step on each other's toes."

Hilary enters Ashley's office unannounced and is stunned by what she sees. Teases Morgan, "Hilary knows that she now has Ashley right in the palm of her hand."

THE STORY BEHIND CIARA'S SHOCKING RAPE ON DAYS

■ Daytime newcomer Vivian Jovanni (Ciara) was given some intensely emotional material in the wake of Chase's assault on Ciara. The actress says she was first clued in to the story well in advance of getting the scripts. "My acting coach told me that it might be a possibility that Ciara gets raped, so I had an idea already of where they were going to go with the storyline," begins Jovanni. "When Albert [Alarr, co-executive producer] and Josh [Griffith, co-head writer] told me that Ciara was, indeed, going to be raped, I was nervous at first, but also very grateful to be getting the opportunity to explore this complex and layered storyline."

Because of DAYS's accelerated tape schedule, the actress kept the twist to herself. "I didn't talk to anyone about it," she recalls. "I didn't even tell my parents because they are fans of the show. I don't share storyline with them."

"Ciara is broken. She feels guilty and ashamed that this happened."

Jovanni went back in the soap's history to figure out her approach to the material. "I actually started by watching Sami's rape scene [from 1994] on YouTube to see how far the show usually takes scenes like this. That actually helped me the most. I also read up on other women's stories to learn how things like this can happen and to learn how events like this affect people during and after."

She didn't do a lot of prep work with co-star Jonathon McClendon (Chase), however. "We wanted the scene to be as realistic and spontaneous as possible," she explains. "After they told us, we definitely got a lot closer. There wasn't much dialogue to go over, so we didn't really go over the script that much; we just talked about the emotional tone of the scene a lot more than anything."

When it came time to film the episode, Jovanni says she was initially calm. "I felt good that morning; it just felt like another day at work," she notes. "When we actually started shooting the scenes, things changed and I started getting nervous. [Director] Noel Maxam came out of the booth and that's when it got real. I can't really remember specifically what he told me, but I could see in his eyes that, okay, this is when I needed to get serious and that's when it went dark. It was a very intense scene and I knew that if I wanted it to be real, I needed to be completely committed to everything she was feeling in those moments. All I can remember from that point on was Ciara's fear and terror of being violated by someone she trusted and cared for."

After the filming was done, Jovanni had to take a moment for herself. "I remember walking to the back of the set, being overwhelmed by emotion, and I just started crying. [Producer] Janet Spellman-Drucker came up to me and I cried on her shoulder; it was very comforting to have her there. I then went outside to get some air and decompress a bit. When I went back to the set, it kind of seemed like everyone in that room was crying, as well. That's when I realized that this is a safe zone; everyone was concerned and supporting me and that really allowed me to perform these scenes as honestly as I could. It was nice to have such a great group of people around me."

At the end of the day, she reports, "I felt so tired and emotionally drained, and I definitely did not feel like myself. It took a while to shake off, but I did feel confident in my work and I left feeling like I did the best I could do. No regrets. I went home and took a bubble bath and watched FAMILY GUY so I could laugh a little bit before learning my scenes for the next day."

As for where this trauma leaves her alter ego, Jovanni notes, "Ciara is broken. She feels guilty and ashamed that this happened. She thinks that this was her fault and she doesn't want to talk about it with anyone. She runs away from people that comfort her, like Claire and Hope. She starts acting out

Chase Your Blues Away: Though Ciara is understandably wary of Chase, Jovanni says, "Jonathon [McClelland] and I are good friends; he's always the funny guy on set. It's nice to have him around when we have to be so serious and dramatic all the time."

and wanting to drink, thinking that will take care of her emotional pain."

Jovanni feels the powerful tale has helped her develop as a performer. "Playing emotional material like this has opened my eyes as an actor, because I never expected that scene to get as real as it did for me. Material like this is what helps you grow as an actor and I'm grateful for the opportunity."

Ultimately, she hopes that Ciara's journey strikes a chord with viewers. "The message I want to get across is that this can happen to anyone and that it's okay to speak up because you're not alone; you'll see that Ciara finally does," she says. "There are organizations out there to help, like RAINN and NSVRC. They have trained staff members who will listen and help you start healing from the emotional and physical trauma. I see this storyline as an opportunity to start the conversation about this topic because it is an important issue that needs to be talked about. Every two minutes, another sexual assault occurs in the U.S., and I'd like to give my voice to those that aren't being heard or to those who are too afraid to step forward. If this can happen to Ciara, it can happen to your daughter/niece/friend/granddaughter, too. It's important to be aware of the signs."

who's coming

BOLD AND BEAUTIFUL

Chaz Bono (Minister):

The famous offspring of Cher and the late Sonny Bono appears on March 31 and April 1. "On my way to work for an actual paying acting job. Very exciting," he tweeted the day the news broke. Of course, Bono is no newcomer to CBS Television City, where B&B tapes, since it's also where the actor made his TV debut on his parents' variety series, THE SONNY AND CHER COMEDY HOUR, back in 1972.

Chris McKenna (Dr. Hayden):

The soap vet, who played cop-turned-killer Detective Mark Harding on Y&R from 2014-15 and was one of ONE LIFE TO LIVE's many Joeys from 1990-93, makes the leap to B&B beginning on March 3 as a doc who consults with a troubled Katie (Heather Tom).

GENERAL HOSPITAL

Kristina Wagner (Felicia Scorpio): Maxie (Kirsten Storms) confides in her mom this week. See page 16 for more.

YOUNG AND RESTLESS

Devon Martinez (Shawn Taylor): The actress, daughter of A Martinez

(Eduardo, DAYS), debuts as a new character on March 1.

Gwendolyn Osborne (Evelyn):

THE PRICE IS RIGHT model appears as a wedding planner on February 29 in preparation for Billy (Jason Thompson) and Victoria's (Amelia Heinle) nups.

who's going

DAYS OF OUR LIVES

Tamara Braun (Ava Vitali): Joey (James Lastovic) killed Ava, marking the end of Braun's third stint in Salem. See page 6 for more. "It was so great," enthuses Braun of her latest run. "I love working with Stephen [Nichols, Steve] and Mary Beth [Evans, Kayla]. I didn't get to work with Kristian

CASTING ABOUT

■ Y&R is seeking an African-American actor between the ages of 40 and 50 to play an "intelligent, no-nonsense judge" for at least five episodes.... Riley Bodenstab (ex-Cole, DAYS) just taped an episode of MODERN FAMILY set to air in April or May.... REVENGE alum Gabriel Mann (ex-Nolan) has joined the cast of Showtime's RAY DONOVAN for at least three episodes in its upcoming fourth season playing an aggressive attorney who reps high-profile clients.

[Alfonso, Hope] this time but we had such a good time last time, so it was good to see her. There's so many great people over there and I got to see a lot of people so that was wonderful, and to be welcomed back by them was, too."

YOUNG AND RESTLESS

Stacy Haiduk (Patty Williams): Paul's (Doug Davidson) nutso sister is gone for now — but a backstage source assures that the character will turn up again.

REAL-LIFE STATUS

■ Baby On Board: Congratulations to DAYS's Jordi Vilasuso (Dario) and his wife, Kaitlin, who are expecting their second child. "We are so so overjoyed to share that our little family will be growing in July," she posted online. "We cannot wait to see our little Riley's heart grow as she becomes a big sister. This little ladybug has so much love to give."

CHANDLER MASSEY BACK TO DAYS?

■ After months of backstage buzz that DAYS was in discussions with fan fave Chandler Massey (ex-Will), his former rep, Jeffrey Ballard, took to social media to make a statement (which has since been deleted). "I've been getting quite a few calls about this — so for the record — I can neither confirm nor deny that my former client and good friend, three-time Daytime Emmy winning actor Chandler Massey will be returning to his role of Will Horton on Days of our Lives later this year," he posted. "I guess you will all have to keep watching!!" Massey played the role of Sami and Lucas's son from 2010-14, after which he was replaced by Guy Wilson. Will was killed off last October by Necktie Killer Ben. A recent photo posted on social media indicated that Freddie Smith is back filming as Will's widower, Sonny.

YOUNG AND RESTLESS Victor Busts Natalie

Natalie and Luca watch the feed from Victor's office through the surveillance camera she planted. They witness Victor talking on the phone with Luca's dad, informing the elder Santori that Luca has been fired from Newman. Even by the one-sided conversation, Nat and Luca can tell that his papa is not happy. "Natalie is more freaked out," says Mara McCaffray (Natalie). "She's already jumpy when it comes down to Victor, and this whole Luca situation is making the whole situation weaker."

Suddenly, Victor arrives at Natalie's place and orders Natalie to let him in. Luca ducks into the bathroom and Nat opens the door to Newman, who announces that he knows about the camera she secretly installed in his office. "I think that's a shaking-in-your-boots moment right there," chuckles McCaffray. "She might see some of the worst possible outcomes flash before her eyes. She could be in for some really bad and dark stuff."

The Name Game: Maxie (Storms) is tweaked by Nathan's (Ryan Paevey) misdirected declaration of love.

HOWARD WISE/JPI

GENERAL HOSPITAL Who Is Claudette?

Maxie has cause to suspect that her relationship with Nathan isn't as rock-solid as she thought when he makes a drug-induced slip of the tongue.

"He has just been shot," sets up Kirsten Storms (Maxie). "They're at the hospital and he's on pain medication and Maxie says she loves him and he responds, 'I love you, too, Claudette.'" Maxie's reaction? "Who the F is Claudette?" Storms chuckles.

Nathan has an explanation at the ready, but Maxie isn't buying it — seemingly with good reason. "I think because Nathan has never lied to Maxie before, she knows he's lying; it's easy for her to tell that he's not telling the truth," the actress muses. "Instead of having her usual reaction of freaking out, I think it affects her on a deeper level."

Felicia advises her daughter to trust her beau, but Maxie can't shake her doubt. "She is genuinely concerned that something is going on with her relationship," Storms explains. "And she wants to figure out what it is."

review! What Will Happen

DAY OF OUR LIVES Ben Escapes!

The week begins with Chad alone in the DiMera manse when Stefano suddenly appears to him. "Chad is coming to grips with the idea that Stefano is actually gone," previews portrayer Billy Flynn.

During the encounter, Chad speaks honestly with his deceased dad about what has happened in the weeks since he died. "Chad says everything about what he's feeling," Flynn shares. "It's the kind of talk every son wishes he could have with his father after he's gone. It's very honest."

Chad is pulled out of the encounter when JJ arrives with urgent news. "Ben has escaped from the psychiatric hospital," reveals Flynn. Chad and JJ discuss the ramifications of Ben being on the loose and come up with a plan. Instead of turning to the cops for help, Chad and JJ decide to work independently to hunt down Ben before he can reach Abigail.

"Chad doesn't have any faith in the Salem PD," asserts Flynn. "He thinks that he can handle it on his own."

Secret Mission: Chad (Flynn) and JJ set out on their own to find Ben and protect Abigail (Kate Mansi).

Together Again: With Deacon (Kanan) and Quinn (Rena Sofer), the couple that splits together can still scheme together.

SEAN SMITH/UP

BOLD AND BEAUTIFUL Deacon Helps Quinn

Though he initially wanted nothing to do with Quinn and her latest crazy scheme — convincing an amnesiac Liam that he's her husband "Adam" — something changes Deacon's mind. "Quinn's this guy's meal ticket," chuckles Sean Kanan (Deacon). "And, even though the two of them are splitting up, Deacon still does have genuine feelings of caring for Quinn and hates to see her give in to the lesser angels of her personality. She gets into these crazy, obsessive, bad scenarios that she creates, and this is certainly the worst that Deacon has observed."

Though he agrees to aid Quinn in corroborating the past she created for Liam, he does feel a little bit guilty about his deception. "Deacon and Liam have never had an adversarial relationship," Kanan points out. "His daughter, Hope, was in love with Liam — and that is certainly not lost on Deacon. The one thing he doesn't want to do is go back to prison, so that will definitely be weighing on Deacon's mind."

editor's note

Dear Readers,

I think we all breathed a collective sigh of relief when DAYS received its official pickup from NBC. It didn't seem possible that the show — which has hit some nice ratings highs over the past few months and had an exciting 50th anniversary celebration not too long ago — would be canceled, but the protracted negotiations began to create a ripple effect of unease. So, a big congratulations to Ken Corday and Co. I am sure his late parents are smiling down on him at this happy news and I look forward to what's ahead in Salem as the show prepares to hit 51 in November.

In this issue, our editors pick their favorite storylines ever. GH's "Who Killed Diana Taylor?" mystery is definitely my No. 1, and it fell on Stella Bednarz's list. I can remember being glued to the edge of my bed (my TV was in my room at the time) as Heather donned her nurse's cap and slipped out of the mental hospital. Framing rival Anne by writing her name in blood just upped the drama to perfection. For the full picks from the staff, turn to page 59.

As an avid B&B viewer, I marvel at Executive Producer/Head Writer Brad Bell's ability to keep the story moving so flawlessly with a small cast and a limited time frame. On page 54, we take a critical look at how the 29-year old CBS soap is doing.

what they're wearing...wh information station

Q This question is about jewelry on DAYS. I would like to know the name of the necklace that Hope Brady (Kristian Alfonso) has been wearing. I saw it on the February 4 and 5 shows. Since Alfonso wears a lot of her own jewelry line, I wanted to know which necklace it was. It is long and it has great sparkle to it and it looks silver in color. I would like to know so that I can order it. Thanks so much.

Donna L., via email

A The necklace is, indeed, from Kristian Alfonso's Hope Faith Miracles line. It's the 30-inch Pyrite Sphere Necklace in Rhodium and retails for $120. Go to hopefaithmiracles.com for more information.

winter wonderland

With B&B's Jacob Young (Rick) living in Utah and commuting to L.A., his winter wardrobe essentials vary. "If I was in New York, it would be a completely different ensemble than Utah," he notes. "In Utah, winter is a character builder. It's awesome and it's challenging. I like my cool bibs and my stocking caps. There's no real style up there in terms of winter wardrobe. It's all about warmth and comfort. As far as L.A. goes for the winter, I like a nice, light vest. And luckily, my legs can still qualify for some skinny jeans once in a while. I can still squeeze into them. I'm trying, anyway. Pulling them on is the hard part [laughs]!"

Intimacy Issues, GENERAL HOSPITAL

GH delivered a week rich with character- and relationship-enhancing moments when it delved into the makeup of three decidedly different duos.

For months, Kristina has been dodging questions about what was going on back at Wesleyan, where she'd gotten into trouble significant enough to get suspended (a fact she's managed to conceal from Sonny and Alexis — thus far). She confided in sister Sam that she'd propositioned a professor, Parker, in hopes of improving her grades — and GH served up a stellar twist when Prof. Forsyth showed up chez Davis in the form of soap vet Ashley Jones, turning our assumptions about Parker's gender, not to mention Krissy's sexual orientation, on their heads.

The cat-and-mouse game that ensued between the ladies was filled with tension, sexual and otherwise, introducing tantalizing questions galore. Did Parker invite Kristina's overtures, as Kristina suggested? Did Kristina plant negative reviews of the teacher online when she didn't get what she wanted, as Parker suggested? We suspect that neither woman is completely innocent of the charges against her, but what we know for sure is that Jones and Lexi Ainsworth (Kristina) were terrific together, commanded the screen with their intense and connected work, and that their dialogue was inspired. (A blithe Alexis to Kristina, who claimed that Parker was her academic adviser: "What's the focus of your project?" Parker, in response: "Sex and power.") The potential of this storyline — as coming-of-age yarn, as love story, as family tale — is off the charts.

Kristina's older brother, Dante, also received a surprise visitor to his home: His estranged wife, Lulu. In light of Lulu's overblown revenge scheme against Valerie, we feared this story had lost its beating heart, but Lulu's last-ditch effort to salvage her marriage proved us wrong. The Falconeris took a wistful walk down memory lane and nearly hit the sheets, the site of his sack sessions with Val — but Lulu pulled back. "It's not our bed anymore," she said sadly, more matter-of-fact than accusing, then assured Dante that she still loved him. "I love you, too," he replied. "But maybe it's not enough." In scenes that packed a huge emotional punch by virtue of their maturity, simplicity and earnestness, Lulu signed the divorce papers. "Be happy," she sniffled. "I can't bear to think of you any other way."

Last but not least was the show's handling of Franco and Nina, who under GH's new writing regime have become simultaneously more grounded and more interesting. Their compatibility as partners has hit a snag — she wants kids, he doesn't — that is true to life, albeit within unmistakably soapy parameters (she can't have a bio child because of the side effects of her 20-year coma; he's reluctant to pass down his serial killer genes; and given their psychological and legal histories, neither one is a viable candidate for adoption). In their frank discussion of the matter, beautifully played by Roger Howarth (Franco) and beautifully reacted to by Michelle Stafford (Nina), Franco characterized his DNA as a "ticking time bomb," explaining that the concept of seeing himself reflected in a child's eyes was more worrisome than winsome. His words hit Nina hard on two levels (her own dreams being dashed; her sadness for her beloved's tragic self-image), leaving them at an impasse that will surely continue to test, if not their love, their odds of survival.

These scenes lacked bells and whistles — no exploding houses, no cousins in burning cabins. What GH offered instead was naked, honest human interaction, which translated into stirring drama. □

performer of the week

Rena Sofer

(QUINN, B&B)

When Quinn took an ailing Liam to her remote cabin to keep him out of Steffy and Wyatt's way, portrayer Rena Sofer was given her most intimate material to date, and the actress expertly exposed intriguing new layers to her alter ego.

Seeing an amnesiac Liam so vulnerable affected Quinn, who responded in kind. She seemed not to know what to make of her heart's involuntary softening toward the man she previously delighted in torturing, and Sofer played every conflicting beat with subtle finesse. Her blue eyes clouded with shock and concern, and her body movements were fidgety, as if her new feelings were so uncomfortable, she hoped to be able to shake them off. But Liam's earnest pursuit of finding out his identity, and hers, pushed Quinn to become a new person, someone we hadn't seen before, even with Wyatt. She was motherly at first, clucking over him and feeding him soup, but as soon as she lied to Liam (or Adam, as she told him he was named) that they were wed, his horror at not remembering her — in a moment that Scott Clifton sold to perfection — made her suddenly realize why Steffy, Hope and Ivy all fell for his gentle soul.

Quinn had trouble looking Liam in the eye, unable to check herself and her new awakening with him, but as he expressed real concern for her, she lovingly touched his face, surprising herself. When "Adam" asked her to reveal something about herself, Sofer took Quinn to a new place, one where she was suddenly defenseless, as she explained how, as a little girl, her mother wanted nothing to do with her. "I was inconvenient," she explained sadly, her tone stark and childlike. It went a long way toward explaining why Quinn is the way she is, and Sofer wrung every emotional beat out of the reveal.

Sofer navigated what we thought would be a predictable Quinn trip to Crazy Town to a destination far more complex and compelling. Love or hate the story, it's tough to find fault with her rich and creative portrayal.

Though we've expressed our quibbles with the way GH has handled the fallout from Lulu and Dante's breakup, one aspect we did enjoy was seeing how much Lulu was able to rely on her sometimes flighty bestie, Maxie. Though Maxie tends toward the self-involved, she's been a solid source of support for Lulu during her time of domestic tumult, providing a strong showcase for the genuine rapport between Emme Rylan (Lulu) and Kirsten Storms

Applause, Applause

GH crafted a strong introduction for its new doc, Griffin, by not only connecting him to Lucas, but bonding him to Sonny on an emotional level that resonates with long-term fans who hold Sonny's relationship with Stone in high regard (both characters, we now know, have lost someone close to them from AIDS).... We chuckled at the symbolism of B&B's Quinn selecting "Eve" and "Adam" as faux names for herself and Liam.

With all the doom and gloom in Salem, it would have been nice if DAYS at least showed some sort of celebration over JJ graduating from the police academy. ### BOLD AND BEAUTIFUL

Outta Sight

We're thrilled to see B&B bad boy Deacon back in action, but we just don't understand why the show deprived viewers of the chance to witness what caused his marriage to Quinn to splinter. They were a likable duo with matching mischievous streaks and plenty of potential to stir things up, but alas, it was never realized: Shortly after they tied the knot, Quinn was sidelined and Deacon disappeared. Ten months later, we learned that the couple had separated off-screen. We suppose B&B felt that the breakup was necessary to make the Quinn/Liam storyline possible, but how much more riveting would the tale be if we were as much in the loop about Quinn's romantic life as we are Liam's? As it stands, we feel like we're missing a key chapter from an otherwise terrific book.

YOUNG AND RESTLESS

Kill Switch

Although the death of Dr. Anderson has moved the Christian/Sully baby-switch saga in a compelling direction, we can't help but feel that the timing of her demise was off, as it robbed the audience of the dramatic possibilities that would have come with the deceased discovering that the little boy she'd shuttled off to an unwitting Sharon and Dylan was actually the bio son of Sage and Adam, not Nick, the target of her twisted revenge. Y&R choosing not to play this arc — from the doc's horrified realization to, perhaps, sprouting a guilty conscience over doing the wrong people dirty and scrambling to undo her brazen hoax — is a bit of a head-scratcher; why skip beats so deliciously and inherently soapy? Not to mention that if at some point, the truth comes out and Sage gets her baby back/Sharon loses "Sully", neither woman will get an epic confrontation with the devious doc who put them through such a miserable emotional ringer. In our view, Dr. Anderson's end was premature in more ways than one. □

Second Opinion

The biggest upset during the lackluster Super Bowl was that CBS aired a surprise promo announcing the cancellation of THE GOOD WIFE. "Here's one of our crown jewels," the promo implied, "but we're done with it." After slotting this superior drama after Sunday football games for years, seemingly expecting to bury it because nobody knew when it would come on, the show's fate is now sealed. Granted, the producers had announced their departure at season's end, but still, nearly 9 million weekly viewers held out hope for a continuance. WIFE was written off because its 18-49 demographic number was too low, and if you're over 49, you have one foot in the grave in TV Land. You don't buy advertisers' cars, you shun makeup and perfume, you don't eat out and you still have dial-up. This series was the story of a woman grappling with adultery, career setbacks, a tragic love affair and starting over. Too bad its viewers were too "old" to keep it going. — Amy E. Gross

SECRETS OF THE SET

REPORT!

In this behind the scenes exposé, actors and setsiders reveal how they really feel about the state of daytime.

Money Matters

■ Paycuts, contract changes and tactical renegotiations are the name of the game in today's soap environment, report our insiders. "Today it's all about budget," begins a seasoned vet. "It's not just the actors who have seniority being asked to take a 50 percent pay cut. The number of people working on the crew has been cut. Compared to any talk show on the air today, soaps cost a fortune to produce."

One star says that as a result of the expense, actors are left with little bargaining power when it comes to contract negotiations. "It's a take-it-or-leave-it situation now, because there are so many younger actors today who will work for anything," he explains. "The pay scale has dramatically changed. You now have people who will work for an episode at a rate that was unheard of not that long ago. There's always been a stigma about daytime actors and I feel that stigma is magnified by how much they get paid now."

As a result, contract renewals don't go as smoothly as they used to. "A lot of veterans are off contract, and it's just killing them," reveals a source. "They're made to feel as though they're lucky to be here: 'Don't ask for any money, we are doing you a favor, don't complain.' The veterans that do come up for renegotiation, psychologically, what the shows will do is stop writing them 10 weeks beforehand. So what happens is the veteran starts going, 'Wait a second, I thought I was important here and I'm being written off,' so it completely throws off their equilibrium. So, when they finally come at the last minute with a lowball offer, the actor will say, 'I'll take it!' That's really the mentality."

And then there are stars who are quietly transitioned to a new status. The insider continues, "I know that shows will go to actors and say, 'Listen, we're going to put you on recurring, but no one needs to know about this. We're going to keep you in the opening credits' — because that's a dead giveaway to the audience and to the press, when someone's out of the credits — 'but we're going to keep you and if you don't say anything about it, no one will know you're on recurring.' I know for a fact that there are more than a few people right now in that situation, who you think are on contract but are really recurring. It's just not out there."

“The pay scale has dramatically changed. You now have people who will work for an episode at a rate that was unheard of not that long ago.”

Audience Appreciation

■ Some performers feel that the push to get younger viewers and hire new faces that the audience doesn't know is part of an outdated model. "If these shows are going to continue on and continue to have a viewership, you've got to please the fans you have," one notes. "I don't know a ton of 16-year-olds who are all of a sudden watching BOLD AND BEAUTIFUL or GENERAL HOSPITAL or whatever show. The way I look at it, there's a finite time that the shows will have with its audience, so why not give your audience that history, give your audience the people who they've watched over the years, who've developed their characters? They have longevity for a reason. It's great to bring people back, but then you have to use them."

Luring big names from other shows might not always be a surefire success, either. "Something I've noticed in the past few years — and I know this has always gone on to a certain extent — is bringing people on who were huge on other shows, bringing them on with all this fanfare, then only working them one or two days a week and having them basically do nothing," points out this player. "You can't have someone on the talent level of some of these guys, male and female, and have them do nothing! It makes no sense."

And what about past faves who can't break back into the biz? "In the old days, if you really were a star and you left your show, you had a safety net in the back of your head," explains a source. "For the most part, if you were a big enough name, you would be hired somewhere else. Those days are long gone. There's no room. There are so few roles now because you've gotten rid of five other shows. Now, the show has all the power, like, 'You're lucky to be here, there are a lot of big soap stars, just as big as you, who cannot get a job on another soap.'"

Pushing Product

■ Long hiatuses, and with them the need to film more than five shows per week to save money, has had an impact on what you see on-screen. "It doesn't leave a lot of room for much creativity within the scene," points out a popular star. "If someone's hair is in their face for the entire scene or somebody says something that isn't grammatically correct, or something in the background isn't supposed to be in the set, it doesn't matter. Things aren't caught because we're going so quickly. It's a chipping away of the medium and it's too bad because viewers notice that kind of stuff." The hurried schedule takes its toll, says another set-sider. "In the old days, you could rehearse or you could say, 'You know what? I don't feel good about this. Can we do it again?' Those days are over; they have to be out by 5 o'clock or whatever." Notes this star, "As an actor, I don't feel like I'm part of the creative process. That's behind the scenes, but it's on set, too. Just getting it done feels more important than getting it done right." Adds another, "It's become more of a machine, going in and doing your thing. But the good actors still get that we're entertaining people."

“No one who is still working is ungrateful.”

Write Stuff

■ Interactions between the stars and the show's writers have changed drastically, reveals this performer. "Other actors have told me that back in the day, they would really put their foot down about stuff and go in to the writers and throw fits and the whole nine yards," says the star. "Nobody seems to have that kind of power anymore, or maybe it's that no one thinks it would accomplish anything, but I do think the power of the actor has diminished. We're cranking out so much material, more than ever before, and there isn't time in the day to make demands, even if it's something you feel passionately about, and frankly, even if it's something you know the fans are going to have something to say about."

Another issue may be interference from other parties when it comes to mapping out a show's future. "I don't get the sense that the writers are always writing what they want to write or writing for who they want to write for," shrugs this vet, who has spent time on the back burner. "I don't know if it's network interference or if it's just a matter of dollars and cents. You can take it personally and wonder, 'Did I piss someone off?' But I don't complain and I come in prepared. I'm frustrated about it, obviously, but I feel worse for people who are even more veteran than I am. You watch new people coming in, being groomed as the next big thing, while the proven commodities are just sitting on the shelf."

In The Mood

■ "There is definitely a different mood," asserts one fave. "One thing I have noticed is that because of the scarcity, because there are only four shows, it creates a bit of desperation. There never was that before."

"Everyone is so worried that the rug will be pulled out from under them at any moment that it's just not fun anymore," explains this veteran soap hopper. "Sure, it's great that we're still here and believe me, that does not go unnoticed. No one who is still working is ungrateful. The newcomers don't know any better, but for those of us who've done our time, it's not pretty. What the actors are expected to deliver for a lot less money in such a rush is a far cry from the glory days of daytime, back when we had time to rehearse and discuss the scenes ahead of time. But again, that said, we're just happy to still be here. And thank goodness for the fans who've stuck with us through thick and thin!"

“The show has all the power, like, 'You're lucky to be here, there are a lot of big soap stars, just as big as you, who cannot get a job on another soap.'”

GMENT CALL

“I’m really having a fantastic time,” raves Jensen Buchanan of her new role as Y&R’s no-nonsense judge Elise Moxley. “It’s really a great group of folks there, from the behind-the-scenes people to the cast. There are a lot of people from different soaps who I’ve worked with and have sort of funneled to YOUNG AND RESTLESS, so I was just really comfortable from the minute I walked on the set.”

After years of playing soapy heroines, Buchanan enjoys bringing the flinty Elise to life. “It’s been fun for me to play a little bit of a tougher character,” she says. “I had some scenes the other day and suffice it to say, a little fur flew!”

Wisconsin is a familiar setting for Buchanan, who was born in Montgomery, AL — “We only lived there for a little over a year; I didn’t even have time to develop an accent” — and then moved to the northern state. “I grew up in a small town that’s a little bit south of Green Bay, where the base of my family’s paper business was,” she explains. Buchanan was an only child until her parents divorced and her father started a new family with his second wife. Both sides got along nicely — her parents’ houses were located on the same road — and Buchanan experienced a happy childhood, which was when she was introduced to soaps. “My mother was working, so I would walk to my grandmother’s house after school,” Buchanan recalls. “She’d make me toast with peanut butter and we would watch AS THE WORLD TURNS and DAYS OF OUR LIVES. And then in high school, everybody was into [GH’s] Luke and Laura.”

During that time, Buchanan found her “true calling”, which was theater and music, but school came first. "My mom and I looked at many colleges in rural settings," she recalls. "When we got to Boston, I looked at her and said, 'This is where I want to go to school.' She said, 'You're just saying that to scare me [laughs].'" But I ended up having a great four years [at Boston University]."

After graduation, Buchanan relocated to New York City, where her aim was to perform professionally onstage. "My first job was with this small company called The Light Opera of Manhattan and I was really going on that path. Then I was in an elevator and someone asked me, 'Have you ever thought about doing commercials?' And I said, 'Well no, not really, but okay.' So, one thing led to another and the next thing I knew, I was put under development with ABC, which means they pay you not to work anywhere while they try to figure out where to put you."

That led to her first soap gig, on ONE LIFE TO LIVE as Sarah Gordon. "Honestly, I was terrified; I had no idea what I was doing at all," Buchanan admits. "I remember I used to be completely distracted and startled by the boom [mic] when it would be moving around in our scenes. Anyway, I was so nervous and extremely unprepared, but sometimes you learn by doing. And Robert Woods [ex-Bo] and Erika Slezak [ex-Viki] were great and very kind teachers."

Luckily, then-Executive Producer Paul

Rauch took the newbie under his wing. "He was a tremendous mentor to me," she relays. "I felt sort of like My Fair Lady. I came there young and so green, and he really taught me about New York. He would take me to theater openings and art shows, so he was a huge help."

After three years of playing Sarah, Buchanan opted to leave. "I was going to California to be a big movie star," she laughs. "That was eye-opening. I didn't [officially] move there. I just lived with a friend, and then I went to my 10-year high school reunion."

That turned out to be a fateful night, as Buchanan became reacquainted with former schoolmate Gray O'Brien. "I fell in love and ended up marrying him," she recounts. "That brought me to Chicago where he lived, and I got the call from ANOTHER WORLD."

In a surprise move, Buchanan took over the roles of popular twins Vicky and Marley. "Thank God, I didn't have any idea of what I was in for," she says. "That first year was really hard. When fans love an actress so much as they did with Anne Heche, a recast is really rough. It's hard on the fans, and I can attest to the fact that it's really hard on the person who takes it over. I remember crying and saying, ‘This isn’t working,’ but NBC stood by me. Nine years and two Emmy nominations later, it worked, but it was tough at the beginning.”

Buchanan enjoyed working with Bay City love interests Mark Pinter (ex-Grant) and Paul Michael Valley (ex-Ryan), but one scene partner in particular stands out. “Tom Eplin [ex-Jake] is one of the most talented people I have ever met,” she enthuses. “Working with him was not always easy, but the payoff was so unbelievable. I’ve probably learned more from him than anybody else. He is just so unbelievably talented and it was an honor to work with him.”

The actress stayed with AW until its cancellation in 1999. “We saw it coming and it was sad,” she affirms. “When the show ended, I was pretty burned out, to be perfectly honest. My intention was to take some time off, but I thought that I had kind of completed that part of my life and wasn’t really looking to do anything more. I was just a mom and enjoying that quite a bit.”

After a short GH stint wrapped in 2002, Buchanan believed her time on soaps was done, but 13 years later, Y&R Executive Producer Jill Farren Phelps offered her the part of Elise. “Sometimes stepping away for a while can give you a renewed sense of enthusiasm and I can’t think of a greater place to work,” she offers.

Though Buchanan is currently appearing sporadically as Elise, “I really hope that in 2016 we see a little bit more of her,” she says. “There is a groundwork in place for some good storylines, but when a cast is big, they really have to honor the people that they have and make sure those people are taken care of with good stories before they start digging a whole new story. But I’m optimistic. We’ll see what happens.” □

SNOW BUSINESS

■ One of Buchanan’s most memorable soap moments was being a part of OLTL’s splashy location shoot in Salzburg, Austria, which served as the fictional country of Mendorra. “That trip was so fantastic,” she smiles. “I took my mother. It was fun, although I was really jet-lagged. I remember being wide awake at 3 in the morning. Nonetheless, it was really a magical trip with Jessica Tuck [ex-Megan, above] and Robert Woods, and we had cast members of Les Misérables on our cast at the time and everyone who filled out scenes were all cast members of Les Misérables. Paul Rauch went to the show and was so taken with it, he brought some of them over on location with us.” In one dramatic sequence, Sarah was forced to marry Prince Raymond, but Bo took his place and they escaped Mendorra troops by skiing down a mountain. Buchanan was disappointed that she wasn’t part of the action. “I was so annoyed because I knew how to downhill ski really well, I’ve done it all my life. I saw my stunt double and I was like, ‘This is not acceptable.’ Oh, well.”

market in downtown Los Angeles," he recounts. "It was like walking through a humongous garden. There was so much color. I had a cup of coffee walking through and it was a real treat. I saw hydrangeas that were the likes of nothing I had ever seen before, in purples and cobalt blues. It was extraordinary." After surveying the brilliant assortment of posies, Penghlis made his choices. "I wanted the flowers to create part of the atmosphere and went with long-stem orchids that were in colors of green and burgundy, and white lilies." He then made an excursion to Whole Foods Market. "Everything that I cooked was organic," he adds.

When the guests arrived, Penghlis had just finished preparing the béchamel sauce to put on top of the moussaka. "Then I shaved Parmesan to put on top of that, so that it had a lovely tone," he comments. Other dishes prepared for the evening included shrimp with panang sauce, scallops with capers, arugula watercress salad with shaved Parmesan cheese, and for dessert, limoncello cake.

As the guests entered Penghlis's home, their senses were warmly greeted by the aroma of the dinner, flowers and candles, and music sung by Andrea Bocelli on the sound system. The ambience, shares Penghlis, helped to create “a celebration of life.”

Penghlis says he was in very good humor from the get-go. “Right from the beginning, everybody was standing by the door and I said, ‘Are you looking for an exit already?’ ” he smiles. “Kristian and Danny brought one bottle of Dom Pérignon and a bottle of [Veuve] Clicquot champagne, so that started the celebration right off. Everybody brought some kind of wine and, at the end of the meal, I served my Greek coffee.”

The actor was delighted by the easy flow of the evening. “Your guests are as important as what you serve,” he remarks. “It was nice to see everybody talking together, or grouped separately, with three conversations going on at the same time. It never lulled. It’s funny. Everybody went into the living room with their plates and just started to chat. I think they enjoyed standing, rather than sitting. Usually you invite your guests to the table and it becomes like a watering hole, with everybody talking.”

Penghlis’s art collection was also a discussion point. “Everybody likes my collection, so there was also that part of the evening,” voices Penghlis. “At one point, Kristian’s husband, Danny, said, ‘That artist you collect, Enrique Senis Oliver. I would love him to paint my sons.’ So we’re looking into that. Enrique Senis Oliver lives

“It was my favorite kind of get-together because you have friends, fabulous home-cooked food and great conversation. Thaao went out of his way to cook us a wonderful meal. The moussaka was amazing. It took Thaao hours to prepare and was hugely appreciated.* **”

—Lauren Koslow

“Key to a good dinner party are the guests. It is an art to put the right people together. The consequence is an evening of stimulating conversation and no small amount of laughter. Thaao is Greek and I love that we had these great dishes he grew up with and continues to enjoy. The moussaka was lovely. It was perfectly prepared and full of flavor. Thaao is a perfect host. He was among friends, so the evening was casual, relaxed and great fun.* ” in Spain. He’s one of Spain’s great painters and I have four of his paintings. They also liked the Cuban art that I’ve collected over the years.”

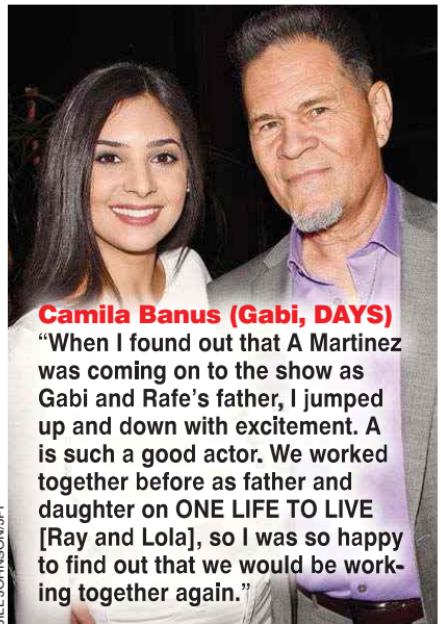

Before his guests said good night, Penghlis offered leftovers and was delighted when Alfonso accepted some moussaka. “The wonderful thing about moussaka is that it can be used over,” Penghlis points out. “I freeze what I don’t use and it becomes a meat sauce.”

The actor says he hopes to entertain again. “I think I’ll do it again soon,” he smiles. □

Camila Banus (Gabi, DAYS)

"When I found out that A Martinez was coming on to the show as Gabi and Rafe's father, I jumped up and down with excitement. A is such a good actor. We worked together before as father and daughter on ONE LIFE TO LIVE [Ray and Lola], so I was so happy to find out that we would be working together again."

Heather Tom (Katie, B&B)

"That would have to be Patrick Duffy [ex-Stephen]. I was such a huge DALLAS fan [where he played Bobby]. When I was a kid, we were not allowed to watch TV, but on Friday nights, it was the exception. We all got in front of the TV to watch DALLAS and FALCON CREST — that was our one and only night of the week. He is such a beautiful and delightful person. I wish they would bring him back on the canvas. He's a great Logan patriarch."

Jen Lilley (Theresa, DAYS)

"I was excited when I found out that Kassie DePaiva [r.] would be playing Theresa's sister, Eve. I was familiar with her work and knew that she was very talented, so I looked forward to working with her."

Elizabeth McGovern (Cora, DOWNTON ABBEY)

"Working with Shirley MacLaine [ex-Martha, near I.] was a real treat. Finding out that she was a fan of the show was truly heartwarming, and what caught me off-guard was how much I learned about my character from hers. She played the 'bawdy American', and seeing that characterization made me feel as though Cora had come a long way in her ability to adapt to the English way of life. I felt proud of Cora for having started with a mother like Shirley MacLaine and being able acclimate her behavior and her way of maneuvering to her new life in England as well as she did. What a lovely and unexpected surprise that was!"

John McCook (Eric, B&B)

"It was quite recently when they said Thorsten [Kaye, I.] was coming in to play Ridge. I thought that was great news. I also loved the idea of Jacob Young [Rick] coming back to play the same character again after years of being away. I thought that was very cool."

Daniel Goddard (Cane, Y&R)

"Ray Wise [ex-Ian, r.]! He's one of the reasons I started acting because his performance in TWIN PEAKS [as Leland] was so captivating to me. The funny thing is, I didn't even know that he was coming on the show and I recognized him by the back of his head when I saw him on the set. That's how recognizable and burned into my subconscious he is to me."

FAMILIAL TERRITORY

Ashley Jones got a pleasant surprise her first day on the job as GH's Parker: a reunion with William DeVry (Julian), who played Storm, the uncle of her B&B character, Bridget. "In the middle of my rehearsal with Nancy Lee Grahn [Alexis] and Lexi Ainsworth [Kristina], Wil walked up, and I totally still think of Wil as my uncle. I just chuckled to myself about how small the soap world is, and it was just fun to see him and speak with him. He had no idea I was going to be on the show because I was told not to tell anyone, and I didn't! He was so shocked and out of context, he didn't recognize me at first. He got closer and closer and finally he was like, 'What are you doing here? On my set, with a pencil and a script?' We got to sit around and catch up for a little bit, which was so great." For his part, DeVry reports, "I was giving Lexi a little good morning hug and I looked over there and I was just kind of paralyzed for a second. I felt like I was seeing things! I did a double take and I was like, 'Oh, my God, it is Ashley Jones!' It was weird. So surreal!" He stuck around to watch her tape and says, "She did some beautiful work, just impeccable as always. I'm so happy she was available. She's such a professional and a lovely, lovely person."

JILL JOHNSON/JPI

Jason gives a thumbs up to his Y&R entrance.

SLEEPING IT OFF

Y&R's Jason Thompson says that he was surprised to find out that his new role as Billy would begin with the character in a coma. "I didn't know what was going to happen exactly until a couple of weeks before that," the actor explains. "But I thought it was very smart in a way. The first day was basically just lying there, with everybody crying over me, but I got a lot of really good information by what everyone was saying about their relationship with Billy, which was great. I tried to just be as relaxed as possible but listen and take it all in. When we did the out-of-body stuff, that was my first chance at working with everybody. I thought it was a very revealing episode of who this guy is, who he loves and what he wants to be. It was an opportunity for me to jump in and make this guy my own, in a way. I thought it worked well."

Proud Papa

B&B's Obba Babatundé (Julius) couldn't be more pleased about the actresses who play his on-screen daughters. "If I had to have daughters in life, I would have chosen them," he raves of Karla Mosley (Maya), Reign Edwards (Nicole) and Felisha Cooper (Sasha). "Talk about stunning and brilliantly talented ladies. They really have good heads on their shoulders and are real artists. There's a difference between a person who paints your house and a Picasso. Even though they use the same materials, that's what I find with these ladies. They're not just actors. They are artists. They care about the work and take the painstaking energy that is required to go beneath what is on the surface. They go deep, and we've had that experience together. We sit around and we talk shop. We talk about what this family is about and even if it's never spoken on-screen, it informs the material. I think and hope that the viewing population will enjoy this because the Avants have become a real family."

ROCK ON

When DAYS held a big bash last November to celebrate its 50th anniversary at Hollywood's Palladium Theater, Arianne Zucker (Nicole) took part in the cast talent show and performed "I Love Rock And Roll". "Yeah, a bucket list moment!" she beams. "I got to sing at the Palladium." Before hitting the stage, Zucker confesses to having jitters. "I'm not a singer," she admits. "I'm an actor who can sort of carry a tune." While rehearsing with the background singers, Zucker recounts, "I kept saying to them, 'You gotta help me out because I'm not a singer. I just want to have fun and want people to have a good time with me.' They told me, 'Girl, as long as you're having fun, everyone is going to have fun.' They were very supportive, so I didn't feel as nervous. It was just, 'Let's go play karaoke, Ari.' Once I got up onstage, there was such a rush, like, 'Oh, my God, I'm a rock star!'"

REPORT CARD: Bold And Beautiful

A critical look at life in Los Angeles

B&B had an explosive 2015 between the Maya/Myron storyline and Aly's unraveling and shocking death. Can 2016 hold up to its previous banner year? So far, so good....

A

■ Write On: One of Executive Producer/Head Writer Bradley Bell's strongest suits is his brilliant ability to take stories in unforeseen directions and mine surprising twists along the way. Just when it looked like the Liam/Steffy/Wyatt/Ivy quadrangle was going to be a retread of Liam/Steffy/Wyatt/Hope, enter Quinn, Liam's archnemesis, who kidnapped him to her remote cabin. What looked like a Misery tale in the making wound up with Wyatt's unbalanced mom falling for her captive. Who saw that coming?

Back In Business: We took B&B to task in our Best and Worst issue last December for letting the powerhouse trio of Katherine Kelly Lang (Brooke), Heather Tom (Katie) and Don Diamont (Bill) gather dust for the better part of 2015. But these faves have come back, guns blazing, in what is turning out to be the show's hottest and most engrossing triangle in years. Katie's discovery of Brooke and Bill's lingering attraction — the latter of which needed to be addressed after being curiously jettisoned — has already given this group some strong Emmy submission material, and it's only March. Original cast member John McCook took a bit of a back seat, as well, as Eric last year, and we can only hope that his increased frequency will continue. He is the heart of B&B and the feel of the show is off-kilter when he's not on.

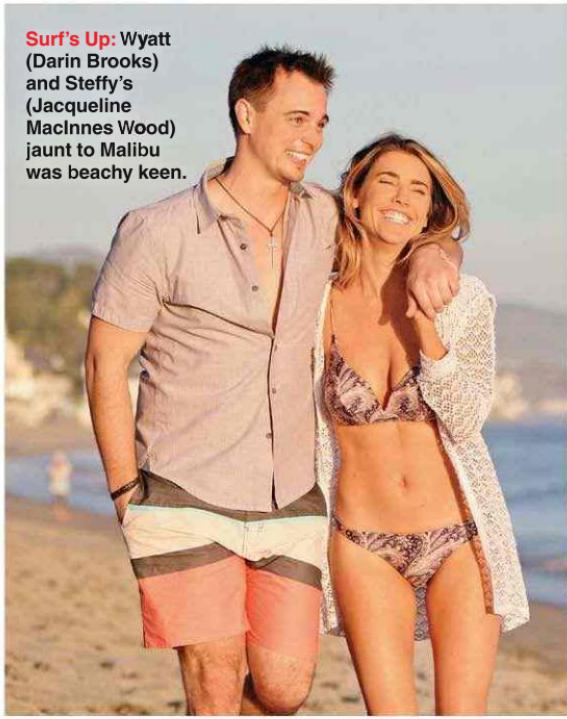

PHOTOS: SEAN SMITH/UPI

Cabin Fever: Pairing Liam (Scott Clifton) with his rival, Quinn (Rena Sofer), was a twist we didn't see coming.

Surf's Up: Wyatt (Darin Brooks) and Steffy's (Jacqueline MacInnes Wood) jaunt to Malibu was beachy keen.

Welcome Additions: Last year, we were introduced to Maya's family in the form of Nicole, Julius and Vivienne, whose complicated family dynamics made for some compelling viewing. The recent addition of spicy Sasha — Julius's secret daughter/ Nicole's jealous bestie — has added some welcome seasoning. The fact that Sasha is targeting Nic's beau, Zende, while Nicole is acting as a surrogate for Maya and Rick only ups the dramatic ante.

Location, Location, Location: Whether it's in Monaco, Aspen, Italy or Malibu, B&B does an excellent job of moving the action outdoors and making good use of the locale, story-wise. Watching Wyatt and Steffy romp on the beach this winter sure looked good to those shoveling snow in the cold weather states, and the establishing shots of Los Angeles before scenes start sets a glam tone.

A Brooke Runs Through It:

B&B has wisely brought Brooke (Katherine Kelly Lang, r.), Don Diamont (Bill) and Heather Tom (Katie) to the front burner in the new year.

C

Missing In Action: The pattern of B&B storytelling is to focus on two big stories at a time, which means some characters find themselves out of favor for long stretches, which can be jarring. Thorsten Kaye's Ridge was off the canvas for three months, smack in the middle of a "Who's The Daddy?" tale with Thomas and Caroline. No phone calls?

HOWARD WISE/UPN

Daddy Dearest: Just when the rivalry between Thomas (Pierson Fodé, l.) and Ridge (Thorsten Kaye) heated up, their players took off for parts unknown.

D

Branching Out: There are many beloved Forresters who are being blatantly neglected. The death of Aly at Steffy's hand — albeit accidentally — was the perfect opportunity to revisit Ridge and Thorne's combative kinship, but Thorne was shuttled back to Paris before we could even say au revoir. What happened there? Plus, that story played out during the power play for CEO between Ridge and Rick. Does Thorne's voice not count for anything? And, why is Zende living in the family mansion yet his parents, Kristen and Tony, haven't visited? Where are Caroline's two moms? Is there any hope of seeing Emmy-winner Lesli Kay (ex-Felicia) back in the fray? These are vital family members and their lack of use is disappointing. B&B has an embarrassment of riches at its fingertips — please, utilize these folks!

No emails? What about Thomas during this drought? He disappeared, too. Ashleigh Brewer's Ivy sojourned to Australia, creating an opportunity for Steffy and Wyatt, but her absence was felt, as well. Deacon and Quinn's sudden MIA status was a head-scratcher, ditto their off-screen breakup. And has anyone put out an APB on Donna?

Get Carter: Lawrence Saint-Victor is one of B&B's most reliable players, portraying stalwart Carter to earnest perfection as he provides counsel during the many crises around him. But it's high time that he be treated as more than a supporting player and get more to do. Or heck, how about getting a love life? We certainly appreciate that he's in shape, but we would love to see Saint-Victor flex his acting muscles, too.

Carter
Administration:
Lawrence Saint-Victor (Carter) should be more than just eye
candy.

All By Myself:
Considering his lady problems with Nicole and Sasha, Zende (Rome Flynn) could use a little parental guidance.

■ Short But Sweet:

Thirty minutes isn't enough for daytime's No. 2 soap. After 29 years, expanding to an hour would be a welcome change and an opportunity to mix in more faces and places.

In Summary
B&B has been on a roll for the past seven years and shows no signs of slowing down.

All fans have stories that are particularly close to their hearts, and Digest editors are no different.

Here, our staff selects their top five storylines in soap opera history, from the legendary (Karen's double life as a prostitute on ONE LIFE TO LIVE, Kim and Shane's DAYS OF OUR LIVES romance) to the lesser-known (remember when GUIDING LIGHT's Josh and Harley were a thing?).

My Top
Five

Josh and Harley
(Robert Newman and Beth Ehlers)

A Fan Since: I was in third grade when I got sucked into DAYS OF OUR LIVES, the soap of choice for my best friend Julie's mom, Margie.

The Story That Got Me Hooked: Steve and Kayla's love story — which also got me hooked on Digest!

Josh And Harley's Romance, GUIDING LIGHT, 1990-91

I started watching GL to catch Kim Zimmer in action before Reva drove her car off a bridge to her presumed death. I didn't expect to get hooked, but the slow-burn love story of Reva's widower, Josh, and Harley, who was nanny to the pair's two young kids, completely captivated me. Every moment of this tale is etched into my brain; in fact, I once had to gently correct Robert Newman (Josh) when he got his Josh/Harley chronology wrong ("No, Robert, Josh shaved his beard off after they had sex"). The story was so subtle, and both characters were so in denial about their burgeoning feelings for each other as Harley challenged Josh to deal with his grief in order to be present for his children, that I didn't think the show was actually going to pair them. I was proven gloriously wrong on November 16, 1990, when they shared their first kiss. Alas, the characters broke up when Newman left the show in 1991. I think I took it harder than Harley did!

Who Shot Jake? ANOTHER WORLD, 1990-91

Anne Heche, who played twins Vicky and Marley, was the first star I ever shipped, solidifying me as a daily AW viewer circa 1989. I was primarily a Vicky fan, but in this story, Marley — who Jake raped on the night someone plugged him with a bullet in his loft — shined just as brightly. Many women had motive to shoot Jake (his future wife, Paulina, would ultimately be revealed as the culprit), and I loved the fantasy sequence of Jake playing poker with the suspects. But the scene most indelible to me was the conversation between a loaded-for-bear Vicky and a traumatized Marley after the rape. Heche was nothing short of brilliant; that she could achieve such intensity, such intimacy, while acting opposite herself was mind-blowing to me. Still is, actually!

Blair And Todd Fall In Love, ONE LIFE TO LIVE, 1994-95

When Roger Howarth reprised Todd in 2011, I headed to YouTube to educate myself on the early days of Todd and Blair, whose unorthodox courtship was so well-crafted. One lonely Christmas, the pals/fellow Llanview outcasts impulsively slept together. ("No love," was Blair's only condition; "No problem," was his gruff response.) Though Todd was no virgin—he was a convicted rapist, lest we forget—he'd never truly been intimate with a woman, and the psychological complexity of this first encounter blew me away. When Blair figured out that an oblivious Todd was about to come into a $28 million trust fund, she got him to marry her by claiming to be pregnant. She conceived post-nups (which she discovered when her newly loaded hubby forced her to take a pregnancy test, one she expected to fail!), and their relationship deepened as they anticipated becoming parents, then mourned together when she miscarried. The transformation in Todd as he essentially learned how to love was fascinating—but of course, once they were in love, Todd discovered how she'd tricked him and dumped her hard. They did reconcile... just in time for him to be presumed dead when Howarth quit the show. The saga was at once super-soapy and totally fresh, making a late-blooming, but diehard, T&B-er out of me.

Stone Dies From AIDS, GENERAL HOSPITAL, 1995

Back in 1995, while DAYS was going the full escapism route with Marlena's possession, GH veered all the way in the opposite direction with a heavy, heart-breaking AIDS story—a masterpiece by then-Head Writer Claire Labine that made me proud to be a fan. Soaps hadn't dealt with AIDS in a truly substantive way until the shocking diagnosis of Robin's first love, Stone, who ultimately succumbed to the illness in a scene I still can't watch without weeping (as I learned doing research for our recent "50 Unforgettable Soap Moments" piece). Before Stone died, Robin tested positive for HIV, and made the difficult decision to share the news with her beloved, lest he die with a secret between them. It's a remarkable coda to this brave and beautiful tale that due to medical advances inconceivable back then, we were able to see Robin thrive in the ensuing decades, becoming a doctor, wife and mother.

Joey Picks Pacey, DAWSON'S CREEK, 1999-2000

I was a CREEK fan from day one, but had a love/hate relationship with Dawson himself (loved his CREEK, hated him). Though Joey and Pacey were my fave characters, their antagonistic relationship wasn't given much play. That changed in season 3, when Dawson and Joey's relationship tanked and he tasked a reluctant Pacey with looking after her. Over the course of the season, Pacey fell hard for his beautiful, brainy sparring partner, who ultimately couldn't deny that her own feelings for Pacey had become far from platonic. When Dawson found out that they were hooking up, he demanded that Joey pick between her BFF and her beau. On the season finale, Joey definitively chose Pacey, sailing away with him for the summer on his refurbished boat, The True Love. That Dawson was crushed by this was, to me, delicious icing on the cake, immortalized by the Internet gif of "Crying Dawson". I will always remember the thrill of the story as it unfolded week to week; it was like fan fiction come to life.

Devin Owens

My Top Five

(From l.) Traci (Beth Maitland), John (Jerry Douglas), Jack (then-Terry Lester), and Ashley (Eileen Davidson)

A Fan Since: I was in college, still living at home, and my mom introduced me to AS THE WORLD TURNS.

The Story That Got Me Hooked:

I was instantly glued to the Steve and Betsy romance.

Who Is Brent's Child? YOUNG AND RESTLESS, 1984-85

Then-Head Writer William J. Bell was a master of the soapy surprise. My fave was when Brent Davis showed up in Genoa City, throwing Dina Mergeron (John Abbott's first wife and estranged mom of Jack, Ashley and Traci) for a loop. She'd had an affair with Brent, and, we learned, one of the Abbott kids was the product of their tryst! But which one? The riddle was deliciously complicated because Brent was interacting with each candidate. Could the morally dubious Jack be so unlike John because he was someone else's son? Or was Davis blood the reason why bookworm

Traci was so different from her glamourous siblings? I never suspected it was Ashley, who seemed like an Abbott through and through, so I was gobsmacked when Brent spotted her in a restaurant and marveled at his daughter! When he revealed the truth to Ash, she was so stunned, she lost her memory. Don'tcha love/hate it when that happens?

Who Is Kim's Stalker? AS THE WORLD TURNS, 1985-86

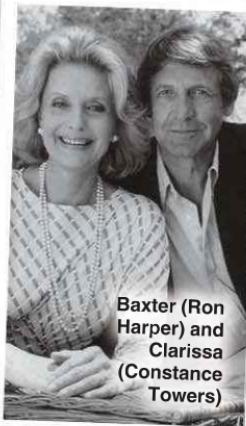

The interest I lost in Oakdale after Meg Ryan left as Betsy came roaring back with this top-notch mystery/thriller from then-Head Writer Douglas Marland. Kim began receiving anonymous gifts and phone calls referencing her days as a nightclub chanteuse, leaving her unnerved. There were crafty red herrings aplenty, with the suspect list including Kim's ex-husband, John, and Bob's first wife, Lisa. Finally, at the end of a Friday episode, the camera panned a never-before-seen room that was decorated as a creepy shrine to Kim. The frame pulled back to reveal the last person I suspected: Douglas Cummings, the seemingly mild-mannered hubby-to-be of Kim's stepdaughter, Frannie. The tale was a masterpiece from start to grisly finish (after taking Kim and Frannie hostage, Doug was fatally stabbed with a letter opener by his ex-lover, Marsha Talbot).

Baxter Is Alive, CAPITOL, 1985

I loved CAPITOL's mix of rivalries (Trey vs. Tyler, for one) and young romances (like Wally and Brenda) set against the glitz backdrop of Washington D.C., but got especially wrapped up in the sweet relationship between widow Clarissa McCandless and Senator Mark Denning. After they got engaged, the dashing Jarrett Morgan arrived, and there was no denying the subtle chemistry he shared with Clarissa. I was stunned when Jarrett confided to his doctor, Thomas, that he was actually Clarissa's presumed-dead husband, Baxter, with an overhauled face! As the attraction between "Jarrett" and Clarissa grew, I was salivating for Baxter to confess all to his true love. CAPITOL took an unexpected approach by having Clarissa figure out his identity on her own. I'll never forget how she clued him in: She invited an unsuspecting "Jarrett" to her home, calmly sat at a piano, and began playing their song.

Baxter (Ron Harper) and Clarissa (Constance Towers)

Vanessa Comes Home, GUIDING LIGHT, 1997

I loved Vanessa and Matt's May/December romance and was bummed when Maeve Kinkead's departure led to Vanessa faking her death to spare loved ones the pain of watching her decline from a neurological disease. Many months later, Kinkead returned to the show (hooray!) and Vanessa went into remission, but stayed away from Springfield. In a poetry chat room, she connected with a grieving Matt, but neither knew they were talking to the other (darn Internet handles!). I found the whole thing terribly romantic — and their near-misses once Vanessa slipped back into town totally maddening. Matt finally deduced that Vanessa was alive and was convinced that if he finished their dream house, she would come home. The townsfolk (even Roger!) came together to complete the build, after which everyone waited for Vanessa to arrive. She didn't show and Matt's supporters left, one by one. When he was all alone and out of hope, Vanessa suddenly appeared in the doorway. The reunion was so tender, so joyous and so worth the wait.

The Aftermath Of Cassie's Death, Y&R, 2005

I was covering Y&R for Digest when the show scripted the tragic demise of Sharon and Nick's 14-year-old daughter, Cassie, one of the saddest soap arcs I've ever seen. But the fallout was equally compelling, starting with Daniel's gripping trial for causing the teen's death (he didn't). Sharon and Nick drifted further apart in their all-consuming grief, as so often happens in real life when a couple loses a child. Sharon turning to Brad for comfort complicated his relationship with Victoria, but it was Nick's affair with Phyllis that stunned and enraged me. However, their undeniable heat, passion and charisma ultimately turned me into a "Phick" supporter. Y&R took a huge risk by killing off a much-loved character, but made it count in ways that are still resonating to this day.

Robert And Holly Fall In Love, GENERAL HOSPITAL, 1983

Theirs was a green-card marriage to halt Holly's deportation (she was pregnant with "dead" Luke's baby). But she overcame grief and a miscarriage by helping private eye Robert solve cases and ... click! His Aussie quips and her British retorts generated sparks on-screen (and eventually off, as portrayers Tristan Rogers and Emma Samms coupled up for a time). Watching this classy couple fall in love was a delight, and their champagne-in-the-sauna scene was my favorite. It seemed so ... spontaneous, and Samms told me that indeed it was. The action was scripted to be erotic — bubbly spilling on Holly's shoulder and Robert licking it off. Instead he shook the bottle, sprayed the champagne in her face and she kept laughing, changing the tone and creating a scene to savor. They kissed, the camera panned to their feet — and two towels dropped.

Shane And Kimberly's Romance, DAYS OF OUR LIVES, 1985-87

If you were a DAYS viewer in the '80s, chances are you had a favorite couple. I was intrigued with the white knight and his damsel in distress, er, the ISA agent who rescued the Brady daughter being blackmailed back into prostitution. The relationship was a tantalizingly slow build. After lots of longing glances and cups of Earl Grey tea, Shane and Kim professed their love at his ancestral English home. But they were plagued by outside forces. Like Emma, his back-from-the-dead psycho wife. Among other things, she trapped a blind (!) Kim in a burning barn. And villainous Victor. Kim slept with him to save Shane's life, and got pregnant in a wrenching "Who's the daddy?" tale. Shane (as yet unaware he was the bio father) delivered her preemie in a cabin, then proclaimed, "We have a son." Aww. True love prevailed: Shane wed Kim — he secretly arranged the nups — on May 4, 1987.

A Fan Since: I was a kid and watched during school breaks (whenever my mom, Norma, a soap viewer, would let me).

Who Killed Diana Taylor? GH, 1981

It remains one of the most chilling soap scenes ever: Heather crouching next to Diana's body, dipping the dead woman's finger in her own blood and writing "ANNE" on the kitchen floor to frame the nurse she hated. We didn't see Heather murder Diana, but she was guilty, right? She sneaked out of the loony bin with a gun to off Diana. But the whodunit took a turn that was a total blindsight. The killer eventually confessed and it was ... Heather's long-suffering mother, Alice! When she found Heather at the Taylor apartment, about to shoot Diana, Alice knocked the pistol from her hand, but Diana got her own weapon. "It was an accident," Alice sobbed. "I just couldn't get her to let go of that gun. I tried and tried and then the gun went off." Heather tried to lay a guilt trip on Mom for letting her be a suspect, but it didn't work. "My own little girl made me a murderer!" declared Alice, who did no time for the crime.

Diana (Brooke Bundy)

Jenny And Jesse Run Away To N.Y.C., ALL MY CHILDREN, 1982

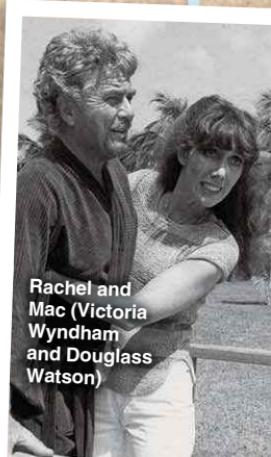

Besties way before the term was coined, teens Jenny and Jesse had led hard-knock lives, but found in each other an unconditional support system. A mortified Jenny fled to New York City after cruel Liza revealed that her "dead" dad, Ray, was actually in prison for raping Ruth. When Jesse confronted Liza, she falsely cried rape, so he took off for the Big Apple, too. The pals struggled to make ends meet, faced danger and bonded with Mrs. Gonzalez, the landlady. This story touched me because of a deceptively simple element: Jenny and Jesse's talks, especially their nighttime chats on the fire escape to beat the summer heat. They were natural and honest and relatable. Jenny: "We're friends for life, right?" Jesse: "Oh, and you know that." Jenny: "And, no matter what, we'll always be there for each other. Deal?" Jesse: "Deal." Sealed with a pinky swear.

Jenny and Jesse (Kim Delaney and Darnell Williams)

Janice Poisons Mac, ANOTHER WORLD, 1980

I was so hooked on this can't-miss-a-day spine-tingler. Janice swooped in to wed Mac after his split from Rachel. Then, at Cory Publishing, she read an unpublished manuscript, Harry Must Die, about a wife who slowly poisons her hubby and murders him. So Janice decided she didn't want Mac, just his fortune — and her sexy ex, Mitch. Uh-oh. She implemented the plan and Mac's condition deteriorated. Rachel and Liz figured out what she was up to, but Janice had spirited Mac off to St. Croix. When Rachel got to Mac, he was nearly a goner, and knife-wielding Janice stood in the way. What followed was an epic showdown: The women grappled for the blade and tumbled into the pool, still tussling. They came up for air and stared into each other's eyes for what seemed like an eternity. Who'd been stabbed? Finally, Janice leaned her face on Rachel's cheek, then her chest, before sliding into the water, dead. (Oh, and Mac lived.)

Phillip and Tara's Tragic Romance, ALL MY CHILDREN, 1972

I was drawn to this soap in 1971 because of the young characters dealing with contemporary issues like the Vietnam War. Tara became involved with Chuck, but her lingering feelings for Phillip intrigued me. The chemistry between portrayers Richard Hatch and Karen Lynn Gorney leaped off the screen. Hatch played sensitivity without appearing weak, while Gorney vividly brought to life Tara's angst over her desire to be with Phillip, but not wanting to hurt Chuck. After Phillip and Tara rekindled their romance, he was drafted, so they decided to elope. When a snowstorm kept them from reaching a justice of the peace, they stopped at a roadside chapel and symbolically married themselves. Soon after, Philip was declared missing in action and Tara discovered that she was pregnant with his baby — but Hatch opted not to renew his contract and my interest in the story was never the same.

Doug and Addie's Elopement Devastates Julie, DAYS OF OUR LIVES, 1972

The powerhouse talents of Susan Seaforth Hayes (Julie), Bill Hayes (Doug) and Patricia Barry (Addie), combined with then-Head Writer William J. Bell's gift for crafting compelling, character-driven stories, kept me riveted to DAYS. When Addie returned to Salem as a widow in 1971, Julie harbored resentment over her mom's past abandonment. The story got juicy when Addie fell for Doug, who Julie was bedding behind hubby Scott's back. Julie initiated divorce proceedings so she'd be free to wed Doug, but he got cold feet at the prospect of being a stepdad to her young son, David, and when she threatened to leave him over his reluctance, he turned to Addie for comfort, impulsively agreeing to her suggestion that they elope. When Julie got the news that her lover had become her stepfather, I was mesmerized by the way Seaforth Hayes played Julie's profound sense of loss and gut-wrenching hurt over her mother's betrayal.

A Fan Since: I had a neighborhood friend who sat glued to the screen when her "stories" were on. I thought they were boring but in 1970, she told me about a new soap, THE BEST OF EVERYTHING.

The Story That Got Me Hooked:

The minute a drug-dealing biker gang blazed onto the screen, THE BEST OF EVERYTHING grabbed my attention. Unfortunately, the soap disappeared after six months — but my love for the medium remained.

Karen

Karen's Double Life, ONE LIFE TO LIVE, 1979

When Karen Wolek first came on the scene in 1976, I wasn't wowed, dismissing her as a selfish pretty girl who'd turned to prostitution because clueless hubby Larry's salary couldn't keep her clad in expensive clothes. But all that changed in 1977, when Judith Light replaced Kathryn Breech. Light delved deeper into the character, helping me to realize the depths of Karen's self-hatred as she struggled to overcome her dark side, desperate to become a woman worthy of Larry's love. As Karen's double life escalated, the story's fascinating twists and turns led to Viki standing trial for the murder of Karen's pimp, Marco. Prosecutor Herb Callison hammered away at Karen while she was on the witness stand, forcing her go to public with all of her shameful secrets. Her testimony exonerated Viki — at the cost of her marriage to Larry. It was courtroom drama at its absolute finest.

Vanessa Frames Lorie For Murder, YOUNG AND RESTLESS, 1981-82

Lance Prentiss's possessive mom, Vanessa, disapproved of his interest in Lorie Brooks and spent years trying to keep them apart. Upon learning in 1981 that she only had weeks to live, Vanessa devised a deliciously twisted plan to permanently exorcise Lorie from Lance's life and reunite with him with Lorie's sister, Leslie, who Vanessa preferred. The manipulative mama lured her enemy onto the balcony, then leaped to her death — but of course, it looked like she'd been shoved by Lorie, who was put on trial for the "murder". Just as Vanessa had planned, damaging "evidence" emerged in the form of a letter from Lorie's typewriter stating she would do anything to prevent Vanessa from revealing that the little boy Lorie was raising, Brooks, was Lance and Leslie's love child (a courtroom bombshell in its own right). At the 11th hour, Lorie was spared when little Brooks testified that he'd seen his granny at Lorie's typewriter, and Lance located pills that proved his mom had been terminally ill at the time of her fall.

Lily's Paternity Revealed, AS THE WORLD TURNS, 1987

Not long after Iva revealed to Lucinda that she was the bio mom of Ms. Walsh's adopted daughter, Lily, Rod Landry turned up in Oakdale. He secured a job in Lucinda's stables, where he befriended teen Lily. Rod's quirky behavior piqued my curiosity; he acted like a guy who was guilty about something. Indeed, in time, Rod revealed that he was actually Josh Snyder, who'd raped his adopted cousin Iva when she was 13. When Iva came upon Josh comforting Lily in the stables, she misconstrued what was going on, grabbed a pitchfork, ordered him to keep his hands off of Lily, and blurted out that she was his daughter! Despite her youth, Martha Byrne was a true pro at conveying Lily's confusion and horror as Iva explained that she was Lily's mother. It was a voyeuristic thrill to have a front-row seat to the fallout.

gunpoint, exposed her Ben ruse and forged Val's suicide note. It was an eerie, suspenseful show, with no music, shadowy camera work and tour-de-force performances, which left us with a haunting final shot of a seemingly lifeless Val, arms outstretched as she reached in vain for the unplugged telephone. That was one long summer waiting for KL's return!

Nikki's Maid Is Joshua's Ex, YOUNG AND RESTLESS, 1997-98

Shortly after I started at Digest, Y&R hooked me with Nikki choosing her handsome gynecologist, Joshua, over Victor to be her latest husband, blissfully unaware that their new maid, "Sarah", was actually his lunatic, presumed-dead ex-wife, Veronica. Then-Head Writer William J. Bell took his sweet time building up to the big reveal with precise pacing (which drove me crazy with anticipation), culminating on the stormy night when "Sarah" outed herself to Joshua. When he rejected her, she shot the couple, killing Josh and leaving Nikki for dead. Nikki woke up and reunited with Victor. When Veronica tried to finish her off in the Newman stables, Victor saved the day and Veronica was impaled on a pitchfork. Evil was vanquished and love conquered all. Classic Bell soap!

Jill Tries To Kill Val, KNOTS LANDING, 1988

It's not often that a nighttime soap's strongest season is its ninth, but in my opinion, KL's was: The show kicked dramatic ass with Jill's deadly downward spiral. When Jill's relationship with Gary hit the skids due to his constant involvement with first wife Valene and their twins, Jill hit the sauce and stirred the pot. First, she gave Val hope that her presumed-dead hubby, Ben, was still alive. Then, in a rare two-part episode aptly titled "The Perfect Crime", she forced Val to take a bottle of pills at

The Salem Stalker, DAYS OF OUR LIVES, 2003-04

My sweet tooth for soap shockers was sated when DAYS announced it was kicking off a murder mystery and no one was safe — and they meant it! Beginning with the murder of cherished police chief Abe, DAYS gave us a tense, taut and deliciously campy Ten Little Indians tale, in which each murder was more stunning than the last. Recovering alcoholic Maggie hit with a liquor bottle? Cassie a human piñata? Tony mauled in a bloody tiger attack at the circus? Horton matriarch Alice done in by doughnuts? Not to mention the biggest shocker of them all — the culprit was Marlena (er, even though it wasn't)! As the body count rose, so, too, did ratings as the crime spree became must-see daytime TV. Sure, the whole "Melaswen" denouement that resurrected the victims was preposterous, but who wasn't happy to see our faves alive and well? It was a roller coaster ride this viewer will never forget.

The Metro Court Hostage Crisis, GENERAL HOSPITAL, 2007

Generally speaking, the budgets and schedules of prime-time shows make them much better equipped to tell action tales. But while I was covering GH for Digest, I was blown away by then-Head Writer Robert Guza, Jr.'s gripping tale of grace under pressure. Told 24-style, the action began with an explosion leaving most of Port Charles in jeopardy and worked backward, with each eppy bringing us one-hour closer to the big kaboom. The show launched a salaciously sinister villain in Sebastian Roché, so good that the-powers-that-be rechristened his "Mr. Craig" as Jerry Jacks. The riveting hostage drama had it all: Robin was shot; romance bloomed between Maxie and her captor, Coop; Carly and Sonny reunited; and Liz finally spilled the secret that Jason fathered her baby, Jake. The most tear-jerking beat of all was watching the beloved Alan suffer a fatal heart attack upon his release, as the horrified Quartermaines watched helplessly on TV. Can't-miss-a-second drama at its finest.

A "Kish" Is But A "Kish", ONE LIFE TO LIVE, 2009-10

I confess that this same-sex love story took me completely by surprise. By 2009, gay characters had firmly established their presence in daytime's core families, thanks to AMC's Bianca and ATWT's Luke. But OLTL not only told an engrossing love story between former frat brothers Kyle Lewis and Oliver Fish (squish-named "Kish"), it shed new light on the joys and pain of coming out while tackling gay bashing and gay marriage, all with heart and humor. Even Dorian got in on the act by marrying a woman to secure the gay vote in the Llanview mayoral race (!). My tastes apparently run toward the flashy; this more slice-of-life tale was an enthralling exception.

MAKING WAVES

Brady arrives at the beach, irrationally hoping to see the woman in his dreams. He goes to a beach-front bar and chats with the bartender, who happens to be Rafe's brother, Dario Hernandez. Brady questions Dario about Summer. Dario says he knows her, but warns she is unpredictable and spent time in a psych ward. When Brady heads back to the surf, he spots Summer walking into the ocean, fully dressed.

After hearing that Nicole is going to Los Angeles, Theresa heads there, as well.

Nicole arrives at the beach just as Brady is saving Summer from drowning. They take her back to Brady's hotel room, where Summer insists that she wasn't trying to kill herself. Brady asks Summer about Daniel. Summer reveals they're friends, but haven't seen each other in awhile.

Sister Act: B&B's Caroline (Linsey Godfrey, l.) is the daughter of the late Caroline's twin sister, Karen (Joanna Johnson).

PHOTOS: SEAN SMITH/JPI

Q How is B&B's Caroline, played by Linsey Godfrey, related to the late Caroline, who people mention from time to time? I know she's Bill's niece, but I'm a little confused about the Spencer family history. Thanks.

Delma D., via email

A When B&B launched in 1987, Caroline Spencer was played by Joanna Johnson and was in love with Ridge. In 1990, they wed, but tragically, she died of leukemia. The following year, the Spencers learned that her identical twin, Karen, who'd been kidnapped as a baby, was alive. She came home to L.A. and stayed until 1994. By 2012, Karen was living in New York and married to a woman, Danielle, and together the couple had raised Karen's baby girl, Caroline, who she named after her late sister. Karen was nervous about coming out to her brother, Bill, since their late father, Bill, Sr., disapproved of her union. Bill, however, didn't mind at all and welcomed Caroline to L.A., promising his sis he'd keep a protective eye on his niece.

Q I know Tony Geary (Luke) retired last year from GH, and I know his final storyline involved him and Laura looking for Lucky. But I missed how exactly Luke Spencer "left" Port Charles. Did he die or did he simply leave town? And what Cassadine was involved in the end and how?

Laura Y.

A Luke did not die; after bringing little Jake home (and rescuing Lucky and Ethan prior to that), he decided to leave town for parts unknown on a journey of self-discovery. His old enemy Frank Smith, not a Cassadine, was the mastermind of Lucky's disappearance, but he did have a final reckoning with Helena on Cassadine Island, where he discovered that she had faked Jake's death and kept the child from his parents.

Q On GUIDING LIGHT, who were Josh and Reva married to other than each other, and how many times were they married to each other? Thank you! Miss the show.

M.R., via email

A Reva and Josh tied the knot a total of three times. Prior to her first union with Josh, Reva said, "I do" to his brother, Billy, and his father, H.B. She was also briefly wed to Alan, but the union was annulled. While presumed dead in Springfield and living in San Cristobel as Catherine, Reva wed Prince Richard, another invalid marriage. Back in the land of the living, Reva swapped vows with Buzz before marrying Josh for the second and third times. Her final on-screen marriage was to Jeffrey. As for Josh, he only had one pre-Reva spouse, Sonni, but he tied the knot with Annie after Reva's presumed death. When his remarriage to Reva failed, he put a ring on Olivia's finger, then married and divorced Reva again. His final on-screen marriage was to Cassie, Reva's half sister.

I know DAYS's Ava was faking that she had leukemia, but aren't there people in Salem who actually had the disease?

Katie, via email

A Yes, there are others. Mike Horton's wife, Margo, was diagnosed with leukemia shortly after they tied the knot in 1978. By 1979, her leukemia was in remission, but in 1980 it returned and she died later that year. In 2002, Chloe found out that she had leukemia, so Craig and Nancy conceived a baby in order to provide curative bone marrow. In March 2003, Chloe's sister, Joy, was born and her bone marrow saved Chloe's life.

Murder Most Foul: Kelly's (Cady McClain) murder on Y&R remains a mystery to both Jack (Peter Bergman) and the viewers.

SEAN SMITH/JPI

A The reason why Ben doesn't seem concerned is because he already believes Kelly is dead. When she was arrested for filing a false police report on Phyllis, Kelly skipped the country with Victor's help. Victor then staged her death, informing Jack, who relayed the sad news to Ben that Kelly had committed suicide. Of course, Ms. Andrews didn't kill herself, as she showed up on Jack's honeymoon and took him prisoner, per Victor's orders. Weeks into his captivity, Jack woke up to find Kelly bloodied and dead, but we never learned who is truly responsible.

What's on your mind?

READY FOR LOVE

The first time I took notice that DAYS was hinting at a Gabi and JJ relationship, I fell in love with the idea of them as a couple instantly. They both have been through hard times, so they understand what the other is going through. They are refreshing together and I haven't enjoyed a couple on DAYS this much in a very long time. I find myself rewinding their scenes over and over again. I love how the show is letting them develop naturally and slowly. That doesn't happen very often in soaps, and I love that. I've seen enough of the instant hookups that it's nice to see them taking it slow. They are just so cute and sweet together and they always bring a smile to my face when I see them on-screen. So I hope DAYS continues with their blossoming love story. Right now, they are in the early stages of their relationship, but I am enjoying the ride. I am a huge fan already. They're golden to me. Camila [Banus] and Casey [Moss] are amazing actors. Go "Jabi"!

THERE IS A SEASON

I was watching DAYS today and it seems that recently they cannot make up their minds which season it is! Salem is supposed to be near Chicago. In February, Chicago is experiencing cold weather and people need to wear jackets outdoors. Today they had some people in jackets and then another person is outside in a sleeveless dress! This happens at other times, too. I know the show is filmed in L.A., but in "Salem", seasons do occur. Please pay attention to these things. They drive fans crazy!

BOLD THINKING

I have watched B&B for 20-plus years and have subscribed to SOD for the same amount of time. I would like to see more fashion shows or at least promos for future shows at Forrester Creations. Please get back to Steffy and Liam building a life together and making Forrester a powerhouse like it was in the Stephanie and Eric era. Please, writers, do not change the characters' history or personality overnight, either. I want to keep watching the show. Steffy and Liam have fought hard to be together and are starting to grow together. Steffy has always loved him, and throwing her to Wyatt is character assassination. This is not being true to Steffy and Liam. I understand couples need distractions sometimes, but not now for them. They have loyal fans!

STAND AND DELIVER

After watching the February 9 episode of GH, I am giving a standing ovation to Rebecca Herbst. What a powerful performance. My heart absolutely broke for Liz as she sobbed all alone from relief that Jake did not hurt Sam. At the end of the episode as Liz stood in front of her blown-to-bits home, watching the literal wreckage of her life, I just wanted to jump through my TV and hug her. Rebecca is just exquisite. She makes you feel every single emotion going through Liz with such ferocity. This whole storyline has been so unfair to Liz and at every turn, I have found myself rooting for her and against everyone else. Rebecca makes you feel so deeply for Liz that I just can't help but pull for her to come out stronger in this ordeal. I want to see her piece her life back together and I want to see her get all the happiness that she so deserves. I want to

LIFE LESSONS

I'm amazed at the people who think Jason and Liz are the loves of each other's lives on GH. Their relationship was a blip compared to his with Sam and hers with Lucky, the actual loves of their lives. The only reason they appear to have had some epic relationship is because they share a child. In reality, Liz obsesses over whatever man she isn't with at the time. She's lied about the paternity of every one of her children, yet people continue to put her on some saint pedestal. It's tiring. The show is going to reunite Jason and Sam. And chances are they'll have another roadblock at some point. It's what soaps do.

Also, to the reader who implied the shows move actors around like they are players being traded from sports team to sports team: Remember, actors move on, storylines change, budgets get cut. The expectation that actors are never going to leave shows is ridiculous. Getting attached happens, but you have to let it go and move on.

MORE DAYS TO COME

Fans on Digest's Facebook page were thrilled to hear that DAYS got a pickup for another year, and possibly more. Gidget L. enthuses, "Good news to hear as I am a very devoted DAYS OF OUR LIVES fan for life.... I [would] just like to see the storylines be more upbeat, not so sad, as [I] think we all need some real happiness on this show.... The actors and actresses are doing just wonderful.... Here's to DAYS for more years to come!" Sandra M. writes, "I have loved this show for as long as I can remember and I would hope that it keeps going. They must have done a lot of things right to be on for 50 years!" Julia H. remarks, "I've never thought I would need to worry that DAYS could ever end. This show should continue forever and ever." Cathy W. points out, "Too much doom and gloom.

The show has become dark. Where's the fun and humor a soap should have?" Janice A. suggests, "Now let's stop killing people and getting rid of characters that are good, please."

THE DOCTOR IS OUT

The end of Dr. Anderson's run on Y&R also got people buzzing online. Paula A. says, "I would [have] liked to have seen a major confrontation between her, Sharon, Nick and Sage before she died! Seems we were cheated out of that. Just too easy to end her life without facing consequences. But that was the most exciting storyline that I've seen on the show in a long time!" Joyce V. lauds, "The doctor's death was a sudden and surprising event. It made my jaw drop ... mission accomplished in writing."

TAKE FIVE

Laura Wright (Carly, GH)

■ When you have a full DVR, what show do you watch first? "Probably LAW & ORDER: SVU. After GENERAL HOSPITAL, of course!"

■ Who was your first friend in the soap biz? "Kelly Ripa [ex-Hayley, ALL MY CHILDREN]."

■ What was your favorite movie when you were a kid? "No one is going to know what this is except for Doug Davidson [Paul, Y&R] because his wife [Cindy Fisher] is the lead in it opposite Matt Dillon. It's called Liar's Moon. I own it and still love it! I've totally stalked her at awards shows and stuff [laughs]."

■ Who were your celeb crushes as a teen? "Matt Dillon and Ralph Macchio were totally my guys. If they were on the cover of Teen Beat, I was buying it!"

■ What item is always in your fridge? "Salad — lettuce, cucumber, tomatoes."
